London Anti-Racism Collaboration for Health Annual Conference

Strength in collaboration: creating an anti-racist health and care system in London

Join us for the LARCH Annual Conference, a key event bringing together health and care professionals, policymakers, and community leaders to drive systemic change in tackling health inequalities across the region.

About the collaboration

LARCH empowers health and care organisations to embed anti-racist approaches, addressing the disparities faced by Black, Asian, and minoritised ethnic Londoners. Through strategic workstreams and collaborative action, LARCH is transforming the sector for a more equitable future.

What to expect

Showcase: Insights into LARCH's impact and five workstreams.

Keynotes & Panels: Hear from leading experts on anti-racism in health care.

Breakout Sessions: Engage in in-depth discussions on critical topics.

Networking: Connect with professionals and stakeholders across sectors.

Speakers and attendees will include representatives from NHS England, the Association of Directors of Public Health (ADPH), the Greater London Authority (GLA), and more.
