

The ADPH London KHub Network

About KnowledgeHub (KHub)

KHub is a knowledge sharing platform that allows organisations to create online communities enabling colleagues to share information, generate discussion and act as a digital library of resources.

ADPH London KHub Network

ADPH London has now set up it's very own KHub's Network.

This Network collectively hosts all 11 of our thematic networks as “Groups” in one virtual space. This makes it easier to access meeting notes, presentations, and shared resources, as well as connect with other colleagues on the platform.

Rest assured email will still be the main form of communication for key updates, but from now, all meeting content will be hosted exclusively on KHub.

Signing Up

- To access ADPHL's KHub Network, sign-up via this link, using your organisational email.
- Once joined, type “ADPH London Thematic Networks” into the search bar and request to join our Network page.

Joining your Thematic Network Groups

Once you have joined the Network, request to join any of the thematic network Groups you belong to, or have an interest in. From the Network page, click on the “Groups” tab and “Request to join” the Groups listed.

Content Sharing

Once approved, you can engage with- and download content from network meetings. Materials such as meeting slide decks and notes will be uploaded to the site by your network co-ordinators after each meeting. Meeting content will no longer be shared via email or the ADPH London website, so it's important you are set up on KHub.

Troubleshooting

There are several KHub resources available to help with site issues. If you need help navigating the new setup or experience sign-up problems, contact the team for support.

We look forward to seeing you on the platform.
