

The FPH Health Protection Special Interest Group brings you:

Inequalities in Health Protection – Training Day

 Thursday 23 April 2026 |  10:00–16:00 |  Online (Zoom)

Book Event for Free

Are you passionate about protecting health and tackling inequalities?

Are you currently working in health protection, or hope to in the future?

Join us for an inspiring all-day training event hosted by the Faculty of Public Health's Health Protection (Education & Training) Special Interest Group

Theme: Inequalities and Health Protection

This engaging day will bring together current and aspiring public health professionals to explore how we can reduce health inequalities in health protection. The day will feature:

- Keynote Address by FPH President Tracy Daszkiewicz
- Expert led sessions on inequalities in health protection including
 - Infectious disease
 - Environmental public health
 - Vaccines and immunisations
- A careers in public health panel, providing guidance and inspiration for those considering or developing a career in this field. Have your questions ready.

This free event is open for all: professionals, students, registrars, practitioners, and anyone curious about inequalities and careers in health protection. Register now to secure your place

FACULTY OF PUBLIC HEALTH