SSRG Annual Workshop 2014 at **

Knowing or Believing?

The Impact of Evidence and Ideology on Social Care and Health Policy, Practice and Performance

Thursday 27th March 2014

New Academic Building, London School of Economics

This event comprises a range of plenary and concurrent group sessions in which speakers will discuss a range of contemporary issues (for example dementia, personal budgets, child protection, prevention, joint working, joint commissioning, user involvement etc) and the extent to which evidence is impacting on policy and practice both nationally and locally

In doing so, they will identify some of the facilitators, barriers and challenges that can be experienced - including occasions when managers, politicians (and sometimes academics) have a 'mental set' or lean toward their political/ideological version of reality rather than what the evidence is suggesting (where evidence = messages from research; performance monitoring; tacit knowledge; regulator reports etc)

Many of us may have experienced these issues in our workplace, particularly when there is pressure to meet targets or produce reports at short notice. Some examples of evidence being manipulated or misunderstood have been reported in the media: the way that the number of 'troubled families' was calculated; police mis-recording crime statistics and some hospital trusts failing to accurately monitor how long patients are waiting for treatment, and a recent report that suggested public health professionals working in local authorities believed that health decisions are being made based on politics rather than evidence.

The annual workshop won't have all the solutions, but there will be plenty to discuss with speakers and with colleagues from other localities and from different professional backgrounds - and plenty of ideas to take back to your workplace!

Fees: SSRG member £90

Others £159 (includes a 1 year membership to SSRG)

Attendance at this event can be used as evidence of continuing professional development and 'certificates of attendance' will be provided (on request) for your CPD portfolio
